HONGRONG, JULY 77H, 1894. DE. CANTLIE'S letter to the Sanitary Board is more surprising than conclusive. The second paragraph reads as follows :- "The "epidemic of bubonic plague is ascribed by "public opinion to be due to the bad sani-"tary state, or, in other words, had; our "sanitary condition not been defective we " would not have had the plague. This will "scarcely bear the light of common sense or "of scrantific investigation." But it seems to us that common sense and scientific investigation alike point to the very conclusion the doctor seeks to controvert. Macao bas been as much exposed to infection as Hongkong, but the plague has pot made its appearance there. How is that? Common sense tells us that it is because the sanitary conditions of Macao are superior to those of Hongkong, and scientific investigation tells us that bubonie plague is a filth disease which cleanliness. It is true that the disease with us is an imported pest, but it is our filthy state that has given it the opportunity to become epidemic. The epidemic, as the doctor says, is put down to overcrowding and bad drainage system. He deals first with the drainage and asks what evidence we have that the system is defertive. In the first place we have the evidence of our noses; in the second place we have the undisputed fact that certain of the drains up: Common sense and scientific investigation alike tell-us that a drain that is blocked up is a source of danger to health But, says Dr. CANTLIE, bad drains cause a train of diseases of which diphtheria, tonsillitis, drain throat, diarrhoa, typhoid, and such like are the chief, none of which we had present in epidemic form before the month of May, 1894, nor have we ever had aby of these diseases present in other than sporadic cases during the past decade; and he goes on to maintain that " we have do "valence of disease which could have warned Mail last night, that certain words said

This is a point which might now be put to the test of scientific investigation. We have had a great deal of abuse of the new system, but practically nothing in the shape of actual proof of its breakdown. Although number of houses connected with the system is small as compared with the total number of houses in the colony, it is large enough for by the Spanish forces egainst the natives of the purposes of a test; therefore let a drain to drain visitation be made in all the houses during the rainy season and recommenced at the agement were perfect as regards internals and ones. that contained in the report of the Fever Commission, which was signed by him, so far as appears, without reservation. That report states:-"In cities in Europe 1,000 people to an agro is all that is allowed, and the departure from that rule has been proved again and again to foster disease. Allowing for differences in habits and the possibility of having dwelling houses practically open to the air during seven "months in the year, the Commissioners wajority of five. Which are we to believe, Dr. CARTLE in 1888 or Dr. CANTLIE in 1894.? Ho tells us now that " For eight or nine months in the | ment. "year the windows and doors in our Hong-"kong houses are wide open. The Chinese sleep in the verandah, in the street, in the gutter-anywhere to get cool. The house o not only during the day but during the " night is open to the air, and instead of " having 300 cabic feet of air the Chipaman "practically sleeps in the coen air of heaven.' During the cold season the win-"dows and doors are no doubt tightly closed, "but any one who has spent a night in a "Chinese house in cold weather will have "altered his notion of its ventilating power " as the cold air pours down from batween "the ill-fitting titles on the roof or through "the seams of the floor over head." But sleeping in a Chinese house, that is, a house Belgium built as houses usually are in China, is a very different thing from sleeping in a Taipingshan house. If Dr. CANTLIE were to sleep in the latter we think he would alter his opinion of its ventilating power. It is true that in the hottest months many of the males sleep out of doors, but overcrowding is dangerous in winter as well as in summer, and the females and children sleep indoors all the year round. And it is not only the absence of ventilation that is complained of, but the absence of light cannot exist in the presence of fresh air and The houses being built back to back, and the rooms divided and subdivided until they resemble rabbit warrang, the rear compartments are in darkness even on the brightest day. Without the wholesome influences of sunlight and air any room must become unbealthy; and when i is overcrowded it invites the invasion of filth disease. And to what an extent overcrowding exists was approximately ascertained by an Overcrowding Committee were found to have had their outlets blocked appointed by the Sanitary Board a few years ago. That Committee reported that "in a "number of blocks more than 1,500 persons per acre live and in one small block the rate is as high as 8,285 per acre. INGLISH AND CHINES L DICHIONARY. WITH THE PUNTI AND MANDARIN PRONUNCIATION. An Angle-Chinese Dictionary, published at the Daily Press Office, Hongkong. For comprehensiveness and practical service this Work stands unrivalled. All the new words which the Chinese have of latey ears been compalled to coin to express the numerous objects in machinery, photography, telegraphy, and in science generally, which the rapid advance of foreign relations has imposed upon them, are here given in extense. Each and every word is fully illustrated and explained, forming exercises for students of a most instructive nature. Hoth the Court and Punti pronunciations are given the accents being carefully marked on the best principle hitherto attained. The typography displays the success of an attempt to make the Chinese and English type correspond in the size of body, thereby effecting a vast economy of space, achieving a clearness not previously attained, and dispensing with those vast margins and vacant spaces which have heretofore characterized Chinese publications. and Chinese Dictionary about 100,000, whilst words, and upwar is of 600,000 Chinese charac- ce qui parait sur lear compte dans les jeurnants ters. For practical purposes the arrangement of the work is so complete, that a reference to its pages enables a person who understands English to communicate effectively with natives who understand nothing but Chineso. In this respect the work will be found indispensable to all Europeans residing in China, and to the natives thomselves it explains subjects fully with which very few indeed of them are perfectly asquainted.
